Characteristics of the dissertation:

The dissertation presents a description of research cases that had a military impact on the military security culture of the Airborne Armed Forces of the Republic of Poland.

The dissertation consists of an introduction, five chapters, conclusion, bibliography, appendix and summaries in Polish and English.

The first chapter (Research assumptions) begins with a justification for the selection of the topic, presents methodological assumptions, research goals and problems, as well as the defined main and partial hypotheses. It also presents the methods, techniques and research tools used, and lists the stages of scientific research.

The second chapter (Airborne troops) presents the origins and history of the airborne troops and presents the legal aspects of their functioning. It also describes the structure, purpose and tasks performed by airborne troops, including selected NATO countries.

Chapter three (Voluntary basic military service) presents the genesis of the uprising and the legal aspects of the functioning of voluntary basic military service. It also contains a broad description of the organization and logistic support in the airborne troops.

Chapter four (Security culture as an element of the organizational culture of the airborne troops) presents an analysis of the security culture in the airborne troops. It presents the basic concepts related to it and describes in detail the dimensions of security culture, along with the results of the conducted research.

The last, fifth chapter (Recommendations for increasing the level of security culture of airborne troops in the context of voluntary basic military service) contains conclusions resulting from the conducted scientific research, as well as recommendations for increasing the level of security culture of airborne troops, which were presented in relation to the individual, social and material dimensions.

This dissertation ends with a bibliography that was used in the preparation of the doctoral dissertation, a list of figures, tables, photographs and charts. As the last element, a survey questionnaire, which served as a tool for conducting scientific research, and a summary in Polish and English were included as an attachment.
