

WSB University

Associate Professor Piotr Białowolski

Associate Professor Piotr Białowolski, PhD specializes in applied economics and quantitative methods for research in the areas of economic behavior and well-being. He was a scholarship holder at the University of Turin in Italy.

He currently continues his work on well-being at Harvard University, where he has joined the Sustainability and Health Initiative team at the Harvard TH Chan School of Public Health. His research interests and publications focus on the application of micro-level data for the impact evaluation of financial and social behavior on well-being.